Your friend is seriously ill. How do you feel about this? What do you do?

‘God bless us.’ This is what I always bear in mind. In the world, some people are not as fortunate as us.

Recently, I am worried about my friend Christal. Last Monday, she fainted in the corridor at our school. She was sent to the hospital by teachers right away. After this incident, she always feels dizzy and vomits continuously. Her father thought that there should be something wrong in her health and he sent her to the hospital for medical checkup. Now, Christal has to spend most of her time in the hospital, I feel sorry for her.

During her treatment in the hospital, she does not have appetite and loses all her hair which she takes great pride in. She used to be a girl with dark shoulder-length hair. I feel sad every time I visit her. I told her, ‘It’s not the end of the world, dear Christal, you will be OK!’ However, I can feel her pain from her face. I can do nothing but keep praying and encouraging her.

This tragedy was unfortunate and heart-breaking for Christal’s family. I have to support and encourage her and wish her all the best.
