How can we express our care and love to the handicapped?

In our eyes, we all think that the handicapped are poor and we should show our love and care to them.

Last weekend, I met a man with a broken leg in a subway. He was feeling cold and he kept shaking. I thought he might feel hungry too. Therefore, I gave some bread to him to eat. He looked at me for a few seconds and said ‘thank you’ to me. At that moment, I felt ashamed of myself. I thought that I should do more to help the man by donating some old clothes to him.

Last Sunday, the man was in the subway. I gave my old clothes to him. He felt gratefully and he smiled at me.

“Why did you do this to me?” I did not answer him anything. I just thought that if everyone can try to help the handicapped, the world will become a better place for all people to live in.

Suddenly, a man in a black T-shirt and wearing a black cap was coming towards me. He said that he was a social worker of a voluntary association. He would like to invite me to join his organization for helping the handicapped. I accepted his invitation and he gave some gifts made by some handicapped. I thanked him for those beautiful gifts.

I think helping the handicapped is meaningful. They are nice. If we want to help them, we can donate money, clothing and food, etc to them. We can also visit them to let them feel the love and care.

Let us try our best starting from today!
